

Zoe Nguyen and Rebecca Hall asked 3 teachers, Mrs. Brownjohn, Mrs. Teal and Mr. Meakin these questions:

- 1. What have you been learning in literacy?
- 2. Are your students finding it easy?
- 3. What are they having trouble with?
- 4. Do you think it's helping them?

Mrs. Brownjohn

1. They have been writing stories, recounts diaries, comprehension such as yellow box, lots of reading by themselves, artwork on book characters and listening to stories.
2. Some find it challenging, but they try to do things suited to ability
3. They were having trouble with comprehension.
4. Definitely!!!

Mrs. Teal

1. They have been writing sentences, concentrating on recounts, they have wrote a recount about the cancer council puppets, quality literature, they have reading groups and we have started to use yellow box.
2. Some find it challenging but it is all about learning.
3. They were having trouble with words they don't know but they are learning them.
4. Yes!

Mr. Meakin

1. They have been researching how to train a super-hero and writing explanations on how to train a super-hero. They have also been doing alliteration poetry and cinquains (example written by Tahne Mobbs).
2. They found it challenging.
3. They had problems with sentence structure, some grammar and poetry with rhyming.
4. Yes because they learn new words super sentence building and grammar.
